Monthly Newsletter from the leader in sandbox software for DevOps and Cloud Automatiom

Quali continued its award winning run with yet another industry award for computing security excellence. This coincides with the increasing traction we are seeing with customers that want to replicate environments for cyber ranges, or for security, certification and compliance. We are seeing a number of customers want to take advantage of the snap shot featuring, providing the ability to save and restore environments. A deep dive into CloudShell 9.0 provides prescriptive steps to doing that along with the ability to bring new cloud provider templates into your blueprinting process. This month we also put a focus on automation, both as seen from the eyes of a high school intern, we had at Quali looking at this topic from a fresh pair of eyes, as well as from one of our customers – Liberty Global – who is recognized as a champion to further the cause of automation in his organization. Quali recognizes Champion at Liberty Global for his Initiative and Innovation - Congrats to Maarten Juffermans, Liberty Global who won the CloudShell Champion program under the Rocket Scientist category. Pascal Joly, Director of Technology Partnerships

The Future of Automation - " We must recognize that increasing the intellectual capital of our workers is the only way to combat automation. The importance of intellectual capital is backed by some of the most successful people in our world, people like Barack Obama, Bill Gates, and Warren Buffet" – Guest blog contribution from Quali's summer intern – Tejas Mattur, of Mission High School

Automation Today - "An important distinction to make when discussing automation is the point that an automated system is different from an intelligent system. An automated system simply follows the commands it has been given by the human who programmed it". Guest blog contribution from Quali's summer intern – Tejas Mattur, of Mission High School
